

Offset the carbon impacts of your vacation by enjoying the trails in the Gunnison Valley

Visitors can have a carbon neutral vacation with a community challenge that turns recreation into carbon offsets

In an effort to support a more sustainable tourism economy, the Gunnison-Crested Butte Tourism Association is developing a carbon offset program within the CBGTrails app powered by TerraQuest. Visitors will be able to combat climate change with a community challenge that turns human powered recreation into carbon offsets.

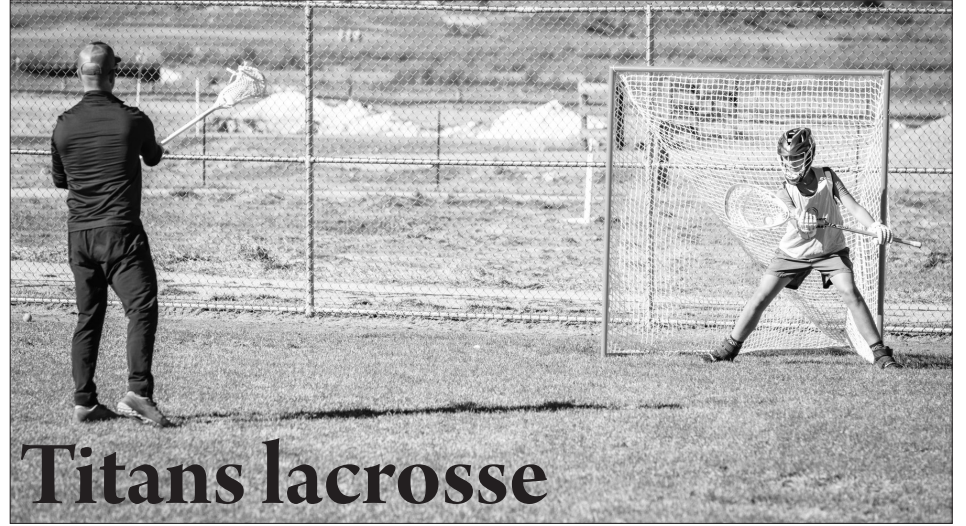

When people visit Gunnison and Crested Butte this spring and summer, their travel will add carbon to our atmosphere. Through this new program unique to the Gunnison Valley, visitors can now offset the environmental impact of their trip by recording a ride, hike or run using the CBGTrails app. It is free and easy to use, and for every mile recorded, users offset 22 pounds of carbon. A 23-mile bike ride in the Gunnison Valley will turn a round trip drive from Denver into a carbon neutral trip.

Visitors who record their human powered recreation in the app will contribute towards a community goal of offsetting 4,253 tonnes of carbon, which is over 9 million lbs of CO2. Users will also be able to track their personal carbon offset as they work to equalize the carbon footprint of getting to the Gunnison Valley. Additionally, they will be able to see a graphic of all user activity in relation to the community goal, and how the carbon credits are being used. 100 miles of human powered activity will offset one tonne of carbon emissions!

The Gunnison-Crested Butte Tourism Association has already purchased UPCO2 tokens. These tokens enable qualified projects to turn their greenhouse gas reductions into tradable carbon credits. As trail miles originating in Gunnison County are tracked, the Association will retire or "burn" these tokens to support carbon offsetting projects. Users will be able to begin the carbon offset challenge on May 15, 2021.

Download the CBGTrails app on your smartphone to get started! Users will also have access to the most complete trail maps of the Gunnison Valley no matter where you roam. For more information on the carbon offset program, and to learn more about what is happening in the Gunnison Valley visit Gunnison-CrestedButte.com.

"We were left off the schedule for a lot of teams because of the shortened season, it is what it is," says Seling.

The shorter season also poses challenges for Seling as he and his coaches are tasked with explaining the basics of the sport to the players, working on the fundamentals of the sport with players as well as introducing offensive formations, plays, defensive formations and the variety of other special teams plays that occur on the fly during the fast-paced sport.

"We're doing everything and we have been able to progress," says Seling. "Just starting with introducing simple formations. During a shortened season it's tough to introduce all of the concepts of the game."

With that in mind, the focus is more on the bigger picture and a long-term plan.

"The main thing right now is to try and build a program," says Seling. "It's about learning the game and growing the program."

The Titans have their first game this Friday when they head to Aspen to face Steamboat Springs. They currently have two home games on the schedule with the first one set for Saturday, May 15 against Montrose at the CBCS field.
